Cable guy charged with DUI while fixing sheriff's Wi-Fi

By Ben Carlson
General Manager

Drinking and driving is always a bad idea.
Drinking and then driving to sheriff's office on a repair call is even worse.

That's apparently what a technician with Time Warner Cable did last Wednesday when he responded to a service call at the Anderson County Sheriff's Office and was promptly charged with DUI.

Randall Ramey of 208 Village Drive, Lawrenceburg was charged by Sgt. Robbie Armstrong after failing several sobriety tests and a blood test.

He was called to fix the office's internet service, which was down, according to Sheriff Troy Young.

In his citation report, Armstrong wrote that Ramey came to the sheriff's office on a service call last Wednesday around 12:45 p.m.

"Upon my contact with [Ramey] he had a strong odor of alcoholic beverage about his person," Armstrong wrote. "When asked if he had been drinking, [Ramey] stated that he had had about eight beers the night before."

"His eyes were glassy and blood shot."

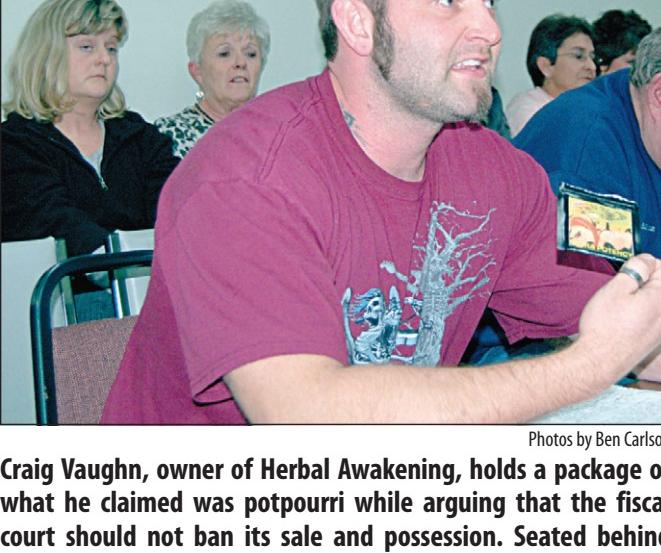

Armstrong also reported that Ramey failed sobriety tests, saying that during a "one-leg test" Ramey "lost his balance at least three times," and that a blood test was positive for alcohol.

Armstrong also reported that it was Ramey's first offense.

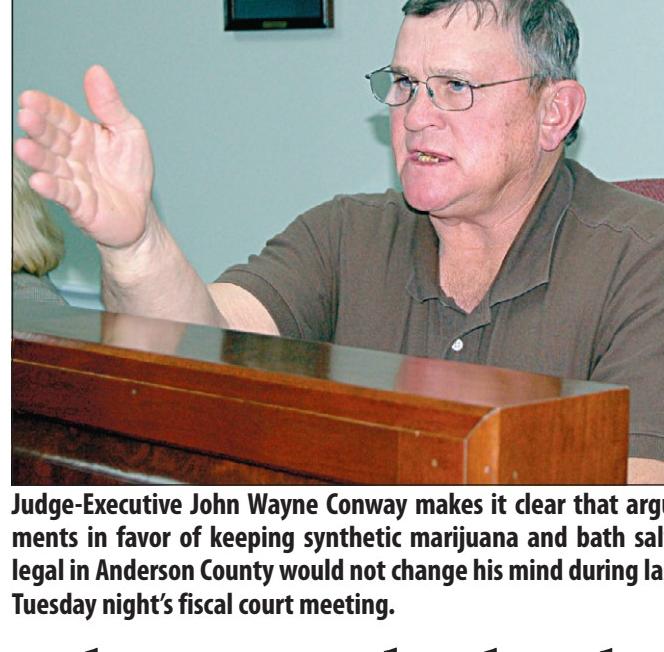

A spokesperson for Time Warner declined to comment, but confirmed that Ramey was employed with the company at the time of his arrest.

Craig Vaughn, owner of Herbal Awakening, holds a package of what he claimed was potpourri while arguing that the fiscal court should not ban its sale and possession. Seated behind him to his left is his probation and parole officer, who said she needed to see him the following morning.

Judge-Executive John Wayne Conway makes it clear that arguments in favor of keeping synthetic marijuana and bath salts legal in Anderson County would not change his mind during last Tuesday night's fiscal court meeting.

Man argues against government intrusion, says 'sex with chickens' should be legal

By Ben Carlson

A public hearing that featured one person being tossed out by the sheriff's office and another advocating in favor of beastiality wasn't enough to sway the Anderson County Fiscal Court from banning the sale and possession of synthetic marijuana and bath salts.

In front of a packed courtroom, magistrates voted unanimously last Tuesday night to outlaw the drugs, which until now have been sold over the counter in convenience stores and other retail outlets.

The law takes effect today, Jan. 25, and those caught possessing the drugs will be subject to a misdemeanor charge. Those caught selling them will also face a misdemeanor charge, as well as loss of their business license for up to five years.

A version of the substances was made illegal recently by the state legislature, but minor changes to the chemical compounds made by manufacturers allowed them to circumvent state law.

The ordinances passed Tuesday by the fiscal court ban current and future variations of the substances.

The hearing, which lasted about 1 1/2 hours, included comments

Ecstasy-laced sex device lands 3 in jail

Police find handmade object under seat in McDonald's parking lot

From staff reports

Three people were arrested Sunday morning after police found a sex device laced with the drug Ecstasy inside their vehicle.

Charged were Ashley Maggard, 20, of 1510 Timbercreek Road; Samuel Oates, 21, of 311 Carlton Drive; and Natalie Likens, 31, of 1011 Bondville Road.

All three were charged with first-degree possession of a controlled substance and possession of marijuana. Oates was also charged with possession of drug paraphernalia.

The sex toy appeared to be made from plastic bags and, in its tip, the suspects had apparently inserted Ecstasy, which they intended to insert in each other to feel the drug's effects more rapidly, police said.

All three were arrested around 8 a.m. Sunday in the parking lot of the McDonald's located at the intersection of US 127 Bypass and Highway 151.

News judged state's best

Paper is Kentucky's best in news, advertising

From staff reports

The Anderson News was judged the best newspaper of its size in the state during the Kentucky Press Association's annual awards ceremony last Friday night in Lexington.

The newspaper racked up a total of 18 awards in news writing, opinion writing, photography, features and sports.

It marks the second statewide first-place finish in 2011 for the paper, which claimed the press association's top prize in advertising last fall.

"Being judged the best newspaper of our size in the state is truly an honor and we are thrilled to receive such a great award," said the paper's editor and general manager, Ben Carlson. "To have won both the advertising and editorial awards in the same year is very, very special."

fined $500, but served 34 days after his initial arrest in October of 2010, The Anderson News has confirmed.

His sentence was recommended by the five man, one woman jury who convicted him of killing an 8-month-old puppy, and agreed to by District Court Judge Donna Dutton.

The sentence, and the fact that he will see no additional jail time, didn't set well with one witness who testified against Dearinger during the trial.

"That don't seem right," said Marilyn Hensley, who said she was with Dearinger and his girlfriend, Elizabeth Dennis, the night before Dearinger killed the puppy.

"I thought he should have got more," she said. "I think he got off easier than he should have."

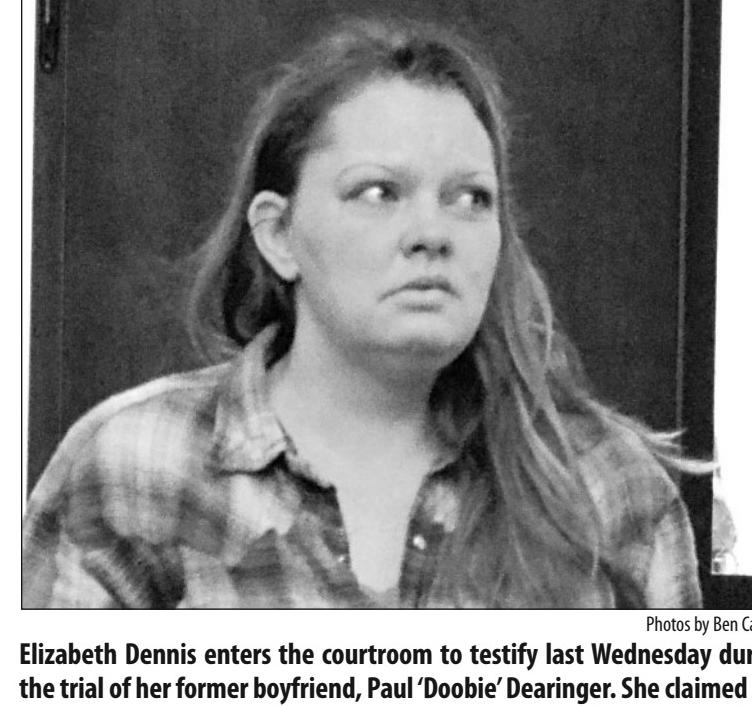

Dearinger admitted to the jury that he killed the puppy, but said didn't mean to. He said he and Dennis returned to their Dry Dock Road home in September of 2010 after a night of drinking in Frankfort when he let the puppy, Buster, and another dog out of the house and into a fenced area that contained a number of chickens and rabbits.

Dearinger said he was fixing a sandwich when he heard the chickens screeching loudly and, when he went outside, realized that the puppy was slaughtering what he called his "baby" bunnies and the chickens.

Dearinger claimed the puppy was in the middle of killing one of the bunnies when he kicked the dog to make it stop.

"I kicked the dog, but didn't mean to," he said. "I didn't do it out of rage, just to get it off one of the bunnies."

Dearinger said the puppy

Elizabeth Dennis enters the courtroom to testify last Wednesday during the trial of her former boyfriend, Paul 'Doobie' Dearinger. She claimed she was 'pretty lit up' the night her dog was killed, and couldn't remember many of the details.

"ran around in circles" for a moment or two after he kicked it.

"I guess I broke its neck," he said. "It died right there in my arms."

County Attorney Bobbi Jo Lewis prosecuted the case, and insisted that instead of kicking the puppy once in his yard, Dearinger beat it to death in the bathroom of the home he shared with Dennis.

Lewis built her case around testimony that Dearinger and Dennis spent the night of the puppy's death drinking in Frankfort, and that both were drunk and arguing before he killed it.

"He got drunk, he got mad and he got even," Lewis said in her opening statement. "This was Elizabeth Dennis' dog, and he proceeded to kick or slam the dog in the bathroom until its neck was broken."

"But he didn't stop there. He threw it out with the rest of the trash, tried to burn it up to conceal his crime and went back inside and passed out."

Lewis pointed to testimony from Dr. Aaron Goodpastor, a local veterinarian who examined the dog's remains the morning it was killed.

Flanked by gruesome photos that showed the dog's head had fallen off after being burned, Goodpastor testified that X-rays revealed that the dog died from blunt force trauma to the neck, which broke its spine and separated vertebrae. He said the X-rays revealed no other broken bones.

Dearinger's attorney, Justin Genko, seized on that portion of the veterinarian's testimony, saying that it shows that instead of being beaten or slammed into a wall, the Dearinger was telling the truth by saying he only kicked the dog in the neck.

Lewis, in her closing remarks, fired back, saying that Goodpastor testified that the dog was hit with multiple blows, "equal to being hit by a car."

"That's a pretty traumatic event," Lewis said. "If you believe Dr. Goodpastor, you can't believe [Dearinger]."

Lewis also contended that

blood, vomit, feces and urine splattered on the floor and walls of the bathroom further proved that Dearinger killed the dog in there.

Dearinger claimed he wasn't aware of blood in the bathroom and said if there was, it was from him cleaning himself up after trying to save a bunny that had "its innards hanging out" after being attacked by the puppy.

Dennis was disjointed throughout her testimony and claimed not to recall much of what she offered the day after the dog was killed in a written statement to investigators.

"I was pretty lit up at the time," she told County Attorney Bobbi Jo Lewis. "I really can't remember too many of the details."

Lewis produced Dennis' written statement and made her read the account of that night, including that she claimed Dearinger abused the puppy in the couple's bathroom, pounding it against the wall.

She said he then set fire in a fire pit, where she found it after Dearinger had passed out. The trial was nearly postponed as police combed

Anderson and surrounding counties for Dennis, who was found in Nicholasville last Tuesday afternoon just an hour before the court's imposed 4:30 p.m. deadline for police to find her. Had she not been found, the trial would have been delayed until March.

Along with being subpoenaed for the trial, Dennis was also wanted on a felony warrant for flagrant non-support.

After the trial, Lewis said she was pleased to get a guilty verdict from the jury.

"Our system is set up like it is for a reason," she said. "The jurors gave thoughtful consideration to the evidence presented, and I'm glad that they saw he was guilty."

She also was thankful for the help her office received from law enforcement to find Dennis and avoid a delay in the trial.

"The sheriff, the city police, state and federal agencies helped us, and it was very heartwarming to see how well they did their jobs to help us do our jobs."

from Craig Vaughn, owner of Herbal Awakening, a store located on US 127 South, just north of Highway 151.

Vaughn lobbied to keep both substances legal despite numerous reports of deaths and violent illnesses among adults and children who smoke, snort or inject them.

"There are bigger epidemics right now than potpourri," he said, referring to the way those who manufacture synthetic marijuana market the substance.

"If you're really concerned, you'd place a ban on tobacco, which kills 90 percent of its users."

At one point, Vaughn held up a package of the now-illegal substance and pointed out that it clearly states that the contents are not intended for human consumption, and that those buying it must be at least 18 years old.

"You say that everyone smoking it is getting sick, and they should be," he said, adding that he doesn't encourage people to smoke it. "If you misuse any product, it will make you sick."

Flanked by about a dozen supporters, Vaughn rattled off smoking rates among middle and high school students, and challenged the fiscal court to produce statistics on the number of children abusing synthetic marijuana.

He also attacked the sale and use of alcohol, saying it also makes users sick, and claimed that the proposed ordinances banning bath salts and synthetic pot were copied "right out of Wikipedia," a website that allows users to post unverified information about almost any topic.

Vaughn then looked at Judge-Executive John Wayne Conway and said it's apparent that the fiscal court had already made up its mind.

"You're not going to change my mind," said Conway. "This stuff is killing kids and you're making money off it. We're going to ban it."

Vaughn then claimed that because his customers come from as far away as Illinois, the fiscal court was preventing him from conducting interstate commerce, which can regulated only by Congress.

"This body has the right to legislate for the health and safety of its citizens," said County Attorney Bobbi Jo Lewis, who bristled at Vaughn's contention that she copied the ordinances from Wikipedia.

"It's not unconstitutional, so don't even get that into your head."

Vaughn's supporters took a different approach, saying that the government doesn't have the right to tell them what they can and can't do.

"We have so many things in this community you can get messed up on," said Adam Eckles. "Some of us use this product as potpourri, and don't think the government should take it away from us."

Another supporter, identified later as Michael Joseph, agreed that the government shouldn't tell people what to do.

"If someone wants to sit in their living room and have sex with chickens, they should be able to do that," he said.

"That's illegal, too," quipped Lewis, the attorney.

"I know my rights as a citizen and most people here don't," said Vaughn. "They're just OK with the government taking over."

Det. Bryan Taylor of the Anderson County Sheriff's Office was one of about 10 police officers in attendance, including Sheriff Troy Young, Chief Deputy Joe Milam, several other deputies and officers with the Lawrenceburg Police Department.

Toward the end of the public hearing, Taylor recalled entering Vaughn's store while working under cover.

"I visited Mr. Vaughn's store last year and asked if he had synthetic marijuana," Taylor said. "He gave me a package, and I

Previously, one retailer who declined to be

Rep. King bounced from House seat; Stevens files

By Ben Carlson
General Manager

State Rep. Kim King (R-Harrodsburg) was stripped Friday of her seat when Gov. Steve Beshear signed into law a redistricting plan offered by the state's House of Representatives.

That plan changed the boundaries of the 55th District from all of Anderson and Mercer counties and a portion of Spencer County to include all of Spencer and Anderson and a portion of Mercer.

King's residence is not inside of those boundaries, meaning she will be unable to run for re-election and that the seat is now open.

King could run for election in the 54th District, but said she will not do so and instead continue working on behalf of the people who put her in office.

"We're in session right now," King said in a telephone interview. "I'm supposed to be doing my job, without distraction, which is a personally imposed work ethic I have."

"That's where I'm supposed to be, not out chasing an election."

As of Tuesday, only former state Rep. Kent Stevens, who lost in 2010 to King, has filed for the seat. The deadline to file for the seat is Jan. 31.

King said she is disappointed but not surprised that she has been booted out of her district.

"I can't say I'm surprised," she said. "The Democrat-controlled house came up with this plan, and Gov. Beshear has already committed to donate $1 million of his leftover re-election campaign to elect more Democrats to the House."

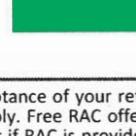

King said she's sure legal challenges will be filed, and there remains hope that an emergency injunction will halt the redistricting.

"We have had a constitutionally sound alternative on the books for months and months," King said.

EDITORIAL

Fiscal court right, proponents wrong

Argument falls well short to keep bath salts, fake pot legal

Arguing against government intrusion into the lives of its citizens is admirable, and more often than not those airing their grievances have justifiable reasons.

That wasn't the case in last week's effort by a game but off-base group of residents who argued against the fiscal court's ban on synthetic marijuana and bath salts.

Those two scourges on our community needed to be banned, and no amount of argument in favor of protecting the rights of people to harm themselves can convince us otherwise.

The main thrust proponents used was that the packaging in which these drugs are contained says clearly that the contents are not to be consumed by humans.

That's fine, but nor does the packaging give the seller or user any indication exactly for what those contents are supposed to be used.

And that's on purpose. The way these substances are packaged, marketed and sold is nothing short of a bald-faced lie designed to skirt the law and allow the products' repugnant manufacturers and insidious peddlers to profit on the backs of the weak-minded adults who have neither the intelligence nor self-control to refrain from poisoning themselves.

Their arguments for keeping them legal included the availability of alcohol and tobacco products, neither of which contribute to the health and well being of society but yet are readily available to the masses.

What's missing from that argument is that booze and tobacco manufacturers aren't legally allowed to hide behind slick marketing tactics (at least anymore), and those who choose to use them know full well the associated health risks.

Thanks to Sheriff Troy Young's D.A.R.E. efforts, that includes children.

The synthetic marijuana and bath salts peddlers, though, market with covert deception. Bath salts are, among other things, marketed as foot powder. Never mind that it's sold in 1-gram vials that don't contain enough powder to cover a big toe, let alone a foot.

Synthetic marijuana, which its proponents would have us believe is nothing more than concentrated potpourri, comes in all sorts of fancy packaging, including one rather hideous design that proclaims it to be "Scooby Snacks," an obvious reference to the old "Scooby Doo" cartoons.

What's next? SpongeBob SquarePants?

Their arguments also included other red herrings, which added nothing to the debate and served only to undermine their own credibility.

Among those was that other toxic items are legally available — "You can walk into Walmart and buy rat poison," one of them said — and that nothing prevents people from ingesting those items.

Other than common sense, we suppose that person was correct.

But what really slammed the door on any argument they posed — again aside from common sense, that is — was when one of them actually argued in favor of bestiality and contended that people should have the right to "have sex with chickens" if that's what they choose to do.

Off-the-cuff comment or not, that remark speaks volumes about one side's ability to make reasonable decisions, and the other's apparent eagerness to continue ingesting substances that are supposedly foot powder and potpourri.

Should they take their own advice and heed the warning not to consume those products, perhaps their arguments will be improved next time they protest government intrusion into their lives.

Finding my home in stranger-filled pool hall

I am a woman with no hometown.

Like a magpie foraging and stealing things to bring back to her nest, I surround myself with bits and pieces of my former lives in other states to recreate a feeling of home.

Nothing tangible, no knick-knacks.

I'm not a snow globe or porcelain doll kind of person.

Local watering holes, like Jim's Pool Room, are more my style.

Recently I had the privilege of meeting Mr. Jim Hyatt (look for the full feature story in our sample edition next Monday) to learn more about the legacy and community of the downtown pool hall.

They say math is a universal language, understood by all despite differences in languages, cultures and backgrounds.

To me, most mathematics (with the exception of some calculus) might as well be hieroglyphics.

In my opinion, the universal language for humanity is the local diner, bakery, bowling alley, coffee klatch gathering or bar.

One step through the doors of Jim's Pool Room, and I found myself back in Nebraska at the Sparetime bowling alley, sitting at a sticky table with a pitcher of beer and my college friends with country music on the jukebox.

There's a little bit of South Dakota, Minnesota and New York in there too, if you look hard enough.

Because loyalty, that fierce attachment to a fixture integral to a community's lifeblood, transcends all state lines.

Talk to an 18-year-old me about singing the praises of a pool hall or bowling alley in writing, however, and she would have thought you were crazy.

Back then, my insanity came in the form of the idea that I would write The Great American Novel by the time I was 22.

Right.

I'd be able to find my name on a Barnes and Noble bookshelf between the dust jackets of Dostoevsky and Dumas, not a on a copy of the weekly newspaper.

Journalism and I fell in love later in life.

But that's a story for perhaps another column.

Instead of looking for my name on a book spine, I'm now searching out a seat at spelling bee competitions and settling into my regular chair at city council meetings.

I'm walking into a pool hall of strangers with a notebook and a pen and discovering a strange feeling of home.

And despite what 18-year-old me might have thought, there's no place I'd rather be.

Diabetes increases risk from flu

Why does having diabetes put me at higher risk for getting the flu?

People with diabetes (type 1 and 2), even when well-managed, are at increased risk of severe disease and complications, like hospitalization and even death, as a result of getting the flu. This is because diabetes can make the immune system less able to fight severe influenza disease.

In addition, illness can raise your blood sugar level. Also, sometimes people don't feel like eating when they are sick, and this can cause blood sugar levels to rise and

Guest columnist

How can I protect myself from getting the flu?

Getting the flu vaccine is the most effective way to prevent the flu. The CDC recommends that people with either type 1 or type 2 diabetes, who are 6 months and older, get a flu shot. The nasal spray vaccine is not safe for people with diabetes.

Additional steps to take daily in order to prevent the flu include:

- washing hands often with soap and water, or an alcohol based hand sanitizer if soap and water is not available
- cover your cough or sneeze - cough/sneeze into your elbow or into a tissue that can then be thrown away
- avoid touching your eyes, nose, or mouth
- try to avoid close contact with sick people

• practice good health habits, such as getting plenty of sleep and exercise, manage stress, eat healthy foods, and drink plenty of fluids

People with type 1 or type 2 diabetes are also at an increased risk of developing pneumonia from the flu, therefore a pneumonia (pneumococcal) vaccine is also recommended for them. A pneumonia vaccine should be part of a diabetes management plan.

Winter a good time to stay indoors with plants

Can you believe it's almost the end of January?

We've had more fall weather than winter weather, and I have never been so happy for being so wrong. Obviously, we still have our most wintry month left to go, but I think we've had enough cold to kill the bad stuff outside, so I'm happy.

We've all saved a little green by not having to run the heater much. That green shouldn't be limited to the folded paper in your wallet, though. It's seed-starting time and wouldn't it feel good right about now to see new green shoots popping up?

Some plants lend themselves to home germination better than others.

Surefire vegetables include basil, broccoli, Brussels sprouts, cabbage, cauliflower, chives, leeks, lettuce, onions, peppers and tomatoes. Some reliable annual flowers are alyssum, cosmos, marigolds and zinnias. Perennials include Shasta daisies, columbines and hollyhocks.

It's a little early to get going on flowers, but I'm starting my veggies just as soon as the moon is right. The next full moon is Feb. 7, so the day after is prime time to start plants that produce their fruit above ground.

Right now you can start gathering materials. Be sure to clean any flats from last year.

Containers that are 2-3 inches deep work well. Styrofoam containers, like salad bowls and egg cartons, work. Be sure to rinse them with white vinegar to kill any bacteria.

Punch holes for drainage into the bottom of containers and set them into trays that will catch the water. You can buy bags of seed-starter mix or you can make your own by blending equal parts of perlite, vermiculite and peat. Add a quarter-teaspoon of lime to each gallon of mix to neutralize the acidity of the peat.

You'll eventually want to repot most of your seedlings into larger containers before setting them into the garden, so plan ahead for more space needs. Moisturize your soil medium in the containers before sowing the seeds.

Drop seeds onto the surface of the mix, spacing them as evenly as possible. I use a colander/strainer thing to lightly cover the seeds to a depth about three times the thickness of the seeds.

Some seeds, such as ageratum, alyssum, impatiens, petunias and snapdragons, should not be covered at all because they need light in order to germinate.

Cover the flats with plastic wrap or glass to keep the environment humid and place them near a heat vent or on a heat mat made especially for seed starting. Most seeds germinate well at about 70 degrees Fahrenheit.

Moisture is very important.

You don't want too much or too little. Mist with a spray bottle or set the trays into water so the mix wicks up the moisture from below. Soil should be kept to a level somewhat like a damp sponge.

At the first signs of sprouting, uncover and move the containers to a bright spot, like a sunny window, a greenhouse, or beneath a couple of ordinary fluorescent shop lights (4-footers with two 40-watt bulbs). They provide a steady source of high-intensity light.

Short days restrict window light, and your seedlings need 12-16 hours of light a day. Suspend the lights just 2 inches above the plants and gradually raise them as the seedlings mature.

I use a power strip plugged into a timer to turn the lights on and off at the same time each day. Seedlings don't have to stay as warm as germinating seeds. Move them away from radiators and air vents, or off the heating mat, as soon as they have germinated.

Next week, I'll explain the next few steps.

Now, go check your supplies, make your list and get shopping.

We still have February to get through and it is always our most wintry month.

I, for one, would rather be inside a warm room playing with plants, while it's sleeting and snowing outside.

Happy growing.

School board to consider $600,000 in pay increases

Instruction fees won't be included in budget

By Meaghan Downs
Staff writer

Salary increases, textbook funding and $200,000 in school bus purchases are three new budget items included in the first draft of the district's proposed budget for the upcoming fiscal year.

A budget committee, composed of administrators, staff, superintendent Sheila Mitchell, finance officer Nick Clark and one board member, offered input for the draft budget presented to the board and drafted by Clark.

"The goal is for everyone to have a voice in the process," Mitchell said.

The first draft budget proposes a $601,286 increase in salaries and benefits for Anderson County faculty and staff.

If approved by the board as part of its working budget in September, payroll expenses would include a salary step increase plus a 1 percent raise and added retirement benefits.

Salary step increases are planned pay increases, approved by the school board through a salary schedule, based on factors such as teaching and educational experience.

Last year, the district froze salary step increases and cut 13 teaching positions due to a $1.1

million deficit.

Clark said the potential salary step increase would be based upon schedules set the year before the salary freeze.

Mitchell and Clark said the district may be looking at an overall 4.5 percent decrease in state funding, according to projected education cuts proposed by Gov. Steve Beshear.

These funding decreases may affect Anderson County schools in terms of its family resource center and technology offerings, to name a few.

"With no textbook funding and very little professional development funding, the district had had to pick up the funding on that," Mitchell said.

Mitchell said textbook funding for all Anderson County schools has been allotted for next year's fiscal budget, but a specific dollar amount probably won't be finalized until May. This will be the first time in three years that the board has reserved a portion of its budget for textbooks.

"We're going to try and see if we can factor in some textbooks," Mitchell said. "We'd like to be able to do that."

According to Mitchell, fees instituted as a means to purchase textbooks, such as the instructional fees revenue accrued by the high school this year, will not be included in the upcoming budget.

The draft budget also included a $200,000 increase to purchase new school buses for the district.

Both Mitchell and Clark said they feel confident the new draft budget is something the school district can sustain, despite decreases in government funding.

The district lost $394,000 in SEEK funds this January during mid-year cuts. The year before, Anderson County schools lost $326,000 from SEEK.

"We're continually expected to do more with less," Clark said, adding that the next two years may be even tougher based on cuts in government funding. "Everybody's getting hit."

The board of education viewed the first draft of the budget at its monthly meeting Jan. 16. A tentative draft budget will be reviewed in May, and a finalized working budget approved by the board in September.

Slashed payroll proposed to balance health department budget

Spending cuts include 33 percent reduction in contraceptives, halting out-of-state travel

By Ben Carlson
General Manager

The Anderson County Health Department's financial woes will be solved largely on the backs of its employees if proposed spending cuts are approved.

The health board's finance committee has approved slashing an estimated $163,000 in payroll and an additional $30,000 in other spending in an effort to rectify an estimated $185,000 budget deficit.

The proposal will be presented to the full health board when it meets Feb. 15. It must first be approved by the state's acting commissioner of public health.

The payroll reductions will include laying off one employee and reducing others from full time to part time.

The pay cuts amount to around 10 percent of the department's current $1.3 million payroll budget, according to new health board chairman Harold Todd, who chaired the committee to slash spending.

The health department has been bleeding reserve cash for the past several years, leaving the health board no option but to spend down its reserves or raise property taxes.

To balance its budget in the current fiscal year, the health board opted to spend roughly $160,000 of its reserves, leaving it nearly broke.

The current $185,000 deficit includes $113,000 in annual payments for the new health building that opened last spring.

On top of payroll cuts, the committee also recommended slashing what Todd called program spending, including travel and contraceptives.

"We are going to cut travel by $5,000," said Todd. "There will be no more out of state travel, and the only in-state travel will be for what is essential," he said.

Travel became a hot button during the past year for the health board, largely due to health director Brandon Hurley attending functions in Texas, Utah, Ohio and Connecticut.

Also cut will be contraceptives. Todd said $4,000 will be trimmed from the department's $12,000 budget. He said the department will continue to provide free condoms because it receives those at no cost.

Women's contraceptives, he said, are where the cuts will be because those are expensive.

Also cut will be $4,000 in program supplies, $2,500 in advertising and $6,900 in what Todd called "space occupancy."

"That includes utilities," Todd said.

"For instance, we'll have the thermostat turned down to 65 at night instead of leaving it at 70, and we'll turn off the outside lights at night."

Todd added that the cuts will also allow the health board to fix its budget problems without raising taxes this year.

Hannah Drury spells 'abbreviation' to win district spelling bee

By Meaghan Downs
Staff writer

Seventh grader Hannah Drury, after three years of competing in Anderson's district spelling bee, won the Kentucky Farm Bureau district spell-off on Jan. 19.

Drury, who is a student at Anderson Middle School, said she's been competing in the spelling bee since the fourth grade.

The closest she's gotten to winning the district bee was in fifth grade, she said, when she finished in fourth place.

"I can't believe it," Drury said of her first place win. "I'm still shaking."

Drury reacted with surprise and a few tears after successfully spelling "abbreviation" and defeating runner-up and Christian Academy of Lawrenceburg eighth grader Brooke Carpenter.

Sixth grade student Lydia Fuqua of Anderson Middle School finished in third place, and eighth grader and Christian Academy student Tyler Parr finished in fourth place.

Drury will move on to the state's 19th annual Kentucky Derby festival spelling bee held March 10 in Louisville.

Next year is the last spelling bee Drury will be eligible for, and she said she'll probably enter again.

"I hope I can make it this far again," she said.

50 YEARS AGO

Jan. 25, 1962

Wesley N. Sims, 26, was promoted to captain in Korea, where he was a member of the 1st Cavalry Division. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Irvin W. Sims.

All Anderson County schools were closed Friday because of the condition of roads following a heavy snowstorm beginning that morning. Superintendent Andrew Bird said this is the only day this year that it was necessary to close the schools.

Connie Herndon, 9, and her brother, Johnny, 4, were to celebrate their prospective birthdays by appearing on T-Bar-V on Feb. 2 at 9 a.m.

They are the children of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Herndon of Alton Station.

Wilson Nicholls, son of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Nicholls, was named the Reserve Champion in the Amateur 3-Gaited Class at the meeting of the Association of Fairs and Horse Show held in Louisville.

Dana Kay Hyatt, 7, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Hyatt, underwent surgery at the Central Baptist Hospital, Lexington for the removal of a needle from her back. Members of her family said the child had apparently fallen on the needle and it lodged between her ribs and punctured her lung.

Deaths

Lloyd Peyton Simpson, 63, rural mail carrier and farmer; Paul Duncan, 41, former employee of the Kentucky Utilities Company, was killed when he fell under a tractor-trailer truck in front of Hawkins Grocery on U.S. 127 about three miles from Lawrenceburg; Minnie B. Palmer, 65, wife of Elmo Palmer; Ivan M. Taylor, 76, retired farmer; Ernest Clifford (Pack) Waldridge, 50, died at the home of his sister, Mrs. R.C. Crouch; Maude Patterson Gregory, 80, widow of Will Gregory; Ed Adams, former resident of Anderson County, died of injuries received in a auto accident in November 1961; Rosetta Flint Beasley, 70, widow of Hade Beasley; Myrtle Ann Cornish, 84, widow of James Cornish; Lillie Catlett Brown, 83, native of Anderson County.

30 YEARS AGO

Jan. 28, 1982

Bart Sayre did it the hard way and almost paid the piper.

After losing 95 pounds during 100 days, the 21-year-old wondered whose ghost looked out of the mirror. He was happy because he had attained the goal he had set, but physically, he felt bad.

After losing the weight in the drastic way he did, he admitted that he should have first gone to a doctor and get some professional advice.

At the beginning he experienced no problems, but later on was very weak and extremely fatigued.

With the problems he had during the process, he decided after he hit his goal, to approach it in a more sensible and safe way. He started an exercise program and eating on a more regular schedule that helped him regain his strength and a more healthy status.

After 15 years on the Lawrenceburg police force, Officer J. P. McMichael retired.

The former farmer, school bus driver and trucker disarmed more lawbreakers with a smile than he did with force. The Colt .38, issued to him when he started, had never been fired in the line of duty and had only been out of the holster once.

"Treat people right and they'll treat you right," is the philosophy of the man who said he's never had much trouble with youngsters. "I've always told the teenagers in a nice way that there were two things I didn't like... showing off in front of me and acting a smart aleck," he said.

He said the patrol job was one of his favorites because he got to meet a lot of his favorite people... children. On several occasions the grade school youngsters handed him cakes, apples and even cups of coffee.

His constant smile grew even

THE WAY WE WERE

broader when he remembered one little girl who came up to him at the crossing one morning and said... "I love you."

"I said, 'I love you too, honey,'" said J.P.

Collis Brown was the new Anderson County Road Supervisor.

Three students at Anderson High joined the Marines in the delayed entry program. They were: David Adams, son of Townsel and Donna Adams; Don Cox, son of Donald and Mary Cox; and David Barker, son of Coby and Tina Barker.

Deaths

Wilson Wash Sr., 75, self-employed construction contractor; John Willie Siers, 74, retired farmer; Roy Butts, 82; Calvin B. Long, 76, retired farmer and superintendent of Sunset Memorial Gardens for 10 years.

15 YEARS AGO

Jan. 22, 1997

Sandra Whitaker was to serve on the Kentucky Local School Board members Advisory Council. She was appointed to a two-year term by state Education Commissioner Wilmer S. Cody.

Students of the week at Saffell Street Elementary were: Keith Dennis, Jaren Holder, Carman Aragon, Steven White, Ashley Richardson, Brittany Hall, Amber Snipes, Desarai Robinson, Samantha Casey, Hailey Samuels, Christin Johnson, Brandon Hammons, Jimmy White, Arien Hurt, Kristen Tracy, Destiny Drury, Sean Roberts, Brittany Hudson, Ryan Johnson, Brittany Stevens, Irvin Gonzales, Scottie Embry, Jessica Case, Erin Young, Brooke Alcorn, Charlotte Ferguson, Roger Johnson, Michael Forster, Leigh Weber, Claire McCall, Jake Beck, Ricky Hetrick, Chelsea Scroggins, Mark Watts, and Justin Thornberry.

Cindy Disponett, daughter of Betty Floyd and Keith Disponett, was selected as Cheerleader of the Week. The sophomore student had been cheering for four years, one of those on the varsity squad.

Her strongest ability was tumbling and her primary responsibility was as a base.

A page was dedicated to neighboring Nelson County and the Trappist monks who live in the Abbey of Gethsemani. The Abbey is a tourist attraction for many.

A mystery to many, 75 Trappist monks live in an area cradled among 2,000 acres in the hills and valleys of southeastern Nelson County. The Abbey of Gethsemani is a haven for the monks in the pursuit of a closer relationship with God.

The monks have supported themselves for more than 165 years by working the farm surrounding the Abbey, making and selling delicious cheese and fruit cakes.

Shane Pike and his sisters, Abby and Libby, were featured in a Janie Buntain column.

It seems Shane was just plain thoughtful. He decided he would send Santa Claus a thank you letter for the things he brought his family for Christmas.

It wasn't that the 7-year-old son of Rick and Angela Pike got something spectacular for Christmas at all. "No, he didn't get anything special, he just sends thank you notes to everybody." It was just the nice thing to do.

Deaths

Nancy Stevens Catlett, 75, owner of Nancy's Drive-In in Shelbyville for 27 years; Lucy Craycraft, 78, retired employee of Southern Molding with 32 years of experience; Patricia Leigh Current, 50, wife of Glenn Current; Jewel Doris Simpson, Dearmon, 66, wife of Roy C. With this in mind, we have scheduled our kickoff meeting for Friday, Feb. 3, at Emma B. Please make every effort to attend.

Feb. 25: 3rd Annual Relay Winter Warm-Up, 8:30-11:30 p.m. at Wild Turkey Trace, 1450 Fox Creek Rd. Music by the Conch Fritters Band. More details coming soon.

June 8-9: Relay for Life event, 6 p.m. to 6 a.m. at American Legion Park. More information concerning "Relay."

An important note to remember ... this year, the only way to sign up teams and team members will be online. This will be the perfect opportunity to do this. However, if you can't come to the meeting, you may go online at www.relayforlife.org/andersonky to sign up at any time.

Our schedule of meetings leading up to "Relay" is as follows: Feb. 28, March 27, April 24, May 29, June 5. All meetings (other than Feb. 3 and June 5) will be held at the Anderson Public Library beginning at 6:30 p.m.

Reader offers thoughts on fasting

I wrote a column a few weeks ago questioning why I do not see American Christians fasting, or why it is not more a part of our culture.

I was blessed to get some rewarding feedback from one of my readers, "Pat," and would like to share some of her experiences that I find inspiring.

These are her words, not mine, and I hope you may find it interesting and perhaps useful in your own spirituality, and perhaps adopt fasting as a part of your own walk with God.

"In my experience, there are different kinds of fasts and for different reasons," Pat wrote.

"The first time I fasted, I was seeking God and decided to fast on my own. The only way I knew to fast was to do without food ... totally!"

Jess Thompson
Guest columnist

"I never lasted more than a day or so, but I did notice a difference in my walk with the Lord so it was worth the effort."

"It is amazing how much of our flesh is in control until we start to fast. Then it cries out — ack! Nothing like saying no to the flesh to be able to say yes to God."

"The first time I did a fast because God told me to was a fast for my pastor and his mission trip to Costa Rica. The Lord told me to fast "while he was gone." That was 10 days, and I had never done that before."

"The first morning I got up and fixed some toast. The Lord said, 'You are supposed to be fasting.' I didn't really want to, but I threw my toast in the trash. I decided to fix some tea with honey."

"I asked the Lord if honey broke a fast and I was reminded of the place in the Bible where honey was food, so I guessed it would break the fast and didn't have that either."

That was the longest 10 days of my life. I will never forget them.

"I don't know how much was accomplished during that 10 days but I was obedient. I have fasted a day here and there, but nothing like a total fast for 10 days."

"Our church has a fast most every year, usually in January. It is for 21 days but they don't do a total fast."

"They do what they call a Daniel fast. We can eat only fruits and vegetables. You wouldn't think that would be too hard to do but if you start it, your body will start to crave those things that you are not eating. Amazing how it does that!"

"Those kinds of fasts are called corporate fasts because the whole church is doing them."

Preachers, what are the reasons for preaching? Where do you get the information that you are imparting to hundreds of people on a yearly basis? Do you preach to impart your faith and want others to believe what you preach, or do you preach the unadulterated truth that can be proved by book, chapter and verse? Do you preach along your denominational lines or are you willing to test your faith by the book of God? See 2 Corinthians 13:5.

Without faith it is impossible to please God (Heb. 11:6). Faith can only come from reading or acquiring knowledge from what is written in the Scriptures (Rom. 10:17). Jesus told his disciples to preach all things that He had commanded (Matt. 28:20). Jesus in John 6:44-47 tells his disciples that those who come to him must be taught of the Father, and those who hear and learn can become a believer and have everlasting life. Notice four words in particular: Taught, Heard, Learned and Believe. Peter said that we must speak only the oracles of God (1 Peter 4:11).

It's high time for local congregations to require of their preachers, TRUTH, backed up by showing from the Bible where that TRUTH can be found. One of the slogans of all local churches should be: "We accept the Bible and nothing but the Bible."

 LSU's Anthony Hickey looks to direct traffic for the Tigers. Hickey led the Kentucky All-Stars, coached by Anderson County's Glen Drury, against Indiana last summer.

Hickey's heart made its way into coach's

Drury impressed by Mr. Basketball at All-Stars

I'm pretty sure Glen Drury is a fan of John Calipari.

The Anderson County boys' basketball coach has often marveled at how quickly Calipari got Kentucky back at the top of the national scene and how he has been successful in getting a different group of previously coddled high school hot shots to play together as a team.

After a win earlier this year, he even talked about one of his players understanding the game much better and saying that the player had created some shots "off the dribble drive."

That last phrase was one rarely uttered around these parts until Cal loaded the truck and moved from Memphis to Lexington.

And, of course, Drury never overlooks defense. With over 400 wins at the high school level, Drury is known as a master of shutting down the opponent and he has to smile when the season stats say that Kentucky holds its opponents to less than 37 percent shooting.

But there is also a huge place in Drury's heart for one Kentucky resident who will be trying to spoil the Wildcats' day on Saturday.

"I just had Anthony in a mini-camp and one practice before we played Indiana," Drury said last week. "I knew then he was special."

Anthony, of course, is Anthony Hickey, Kentucky's Mr. Basketball last year and a member of the Kentucky All-Stars for the summer series against Indiana. Drury had the honor of coaching a team that many said had no chance against one of the greatest Indiana teams ever assembled.

But in large part because of Hickey, who scored 19 points, the Kentuckians nearly pulled it off. It took a last second shot from Marquis Teague to give the Hoosiers a win in Louisville.

The following night, Indiana won a bit more convincingly in Indianapolis, but Drury's relationship with Hickey did not end when they parted ways at Conseco Fieldhouse.

"He left his state championship ring in the locker room in Indianapolis, so I got to keep it with me for a few days," Drury's wife, Jennifer, remembers with a laugh. "We chatted back and forth until I mailed it back to him."

The Drurys and Hickey had become somewhat close through the All-Stars. "Glen and I were there (at Christian County High School in Hopkinsville) when he was named Mr. Basketball," Jennifer Drury recalled. "He was shocked by being named Mr. Basketball. He was very quiet and unbelievably humbled about his honor. He truly seemed a little embarrassed and gave all of his personal glory to his teammates and coaches."

The Kentucky-Indiana series is different from all other all-star galas. Players don't just come together to go through a glorified warm-up drill before playing the game. In the old border war, there are mini-camps and at least a week of intense practice together. There are no "skills competitions" and no one, other than Mr. Basketball, is guaranteed to even get in the lineup.

It is work, but fun at the same time. Hickey never changed, either, deferring to teammates that would

South Oldham holds on in Top 10 battle

Future Cincy Bearcat shines against Lady Bearcats

It was everything anyone could want when No. 1 is playing at No. 2.

"If you came and watched that game and were disappointed, then you are not a fan of the game," South Oldham coach Frank Wright said Friday night.

It was easy for him to say, though.

Anderson County, on the other hand, might have liked just a little more. Maybe like two more points as visiting South Oldham held off a furious Anderson rally to prevail 63-62 in a battle of the region's top-ranked team, South Oldham, and the region's No. 2 squad and preseason favorite, Anderson.

"I think it was what everyone expected. Players, fans and coaches," Anderson coach Tony Kays said. "It was two top-rated teams. They got a lead on us but we came back. A shot here or a shot there could have maled the difference.

There was the big-time player, South Oldham's Jasmine Whitfield, showing early why she had signed to play collegiately at the University of Cincinnati. Whitfield, a 6-foot guard, single-handedly disrupted the Lady Bearcat attack, using her length to come up with key steals in the first half as South Oldham built a lead that would eventually prove insurmountable.

Whitfield led all scorers with 25 points.

"Whitfield is a nice player and she is going to be a nice player in college too," Kays said. "She gave us a lot of problems against our small lineup."

Never was it more evident than in the second quarter when Whitfield picked off Anderson passes on three consecutive possessions with South scoring after two of the turnovers.

"Jasmine has had a good

Wrestlers win at Capital City

Three Anderson grapplers win first in 16-team tourney

From staff reports

Anderson County wrestlers brought home first place in the Capital City Classic, held at Franklin County High School, for the second consecutive year on Saturday.

The Bearcats won the 16-team event with 232 points, far ahead of second-place Louisville Western. Franklin County placed third while Ft. Campbell took fourth.

Three Anderson wrestlers won their respective weight classes: T.W. Stockton (138 pounds), Eric Spencer (145) and Jake Vincent (160).

Three others, Zack Perry (152), Alex Swartz (182) and Travis Kaelin (195), placed second.

"I hope this will give us some momentum going into this weekend's State Duals Tournament," Anderson coach Graham Carlton said.

Anderson will celebrate Senior Night on Wednesday night when the Bearcats host Spencer County at 6 p.m., then will participate in the State Duals at Henry Clay High School in Lexington on Saturday.

Bearcats overcome deficit, slip by Western Hills

By John Herndon
 Sports Editor

It is all about preparing for the tournaments. And with about a month to go before the 30th District meet tips off, Anderson County got a lesson from an old rival Friday night.

"When you get into the post-season, you are going to play someone that has a bad record and has some talent," Anderson coach Glen Drury said. "They are going to play with nothing to lose."

Anderson found itself down 13-2 almost as soon as the Bearcats got off the bus at Western Hills, but somehow found a way to come back and grind out a 61-56 win.

"It was a very tough win," Drury said. "We took their best punch early."

Western Hills, which broke an 18-year losing streak to the Bearcats last year, had come in with a 3-15 record. Drury, however, warned before the game that the Wolverines had some talent but lacked experience.

Anderson, which improved to 14-3, rallied to take a 34-31 halftime lead then extended the margin to 50-40 after three quarters before Western Hills made a furious rally. "They cut it to four," Drury said. "We didn't make good decisions down the stretch. We have to

Anderson swimmers finish third at Western Hills meet

Peyton, Mason take first in individual races

From staff reports

Anderson County had one of its strongest showings of the high school swimming season on Saturday, when it finished third in a meet hosted by Western Hills at Kentucky State University.

The Bearcats placed first in four different boys' events, including the 400-yard freestyle relay.

James Mason took first in the 100-yard backstroke and Braden

Gehefer

Farley

Peyton took first in the 50- and 100-yard freestyle races.

Kylie Gehefer, Cameron Peyton and Ben Spear also had strong days for the Anderson teams.

"We did very, very well. I'm so proud!" Anderson coach Karla Phillips said.

"We were missing five swimmers at this meet. Some of the swimmers that we were missing probably could have helped us score even higher."

Last Wednesday, Anderson also placed third overall in a meet held at Falling Springs Recreation Center in Versailles.

Woodford County and West Jessamine placed ahead of Anderson in the 5-team meet.

Braden Peyton also placed first in the 50-yard free style in that meet.

last coming at 51-37 with 54 seconds left in the third frame.

Somehow, the Lady Bearcats revived in a Lazarus-like fashion to keep the outcome in doubt until the final horn.

"Give our kids credit. They battled to the end. You never feel like you are out of the game with this bunch. We were down but I felt we had a couple of threes left in us," Kays said.

Behind Eriel McKee, who led Anderson with 23 points and created general havoc in the second half, the Lady Bearcats rallied.

Less than five minutes after looking at the last 14-point deficit, Anderson pulled within 55-53 when Sydney Brown scored off a pass from Eriel McKee.

Makenzie Cann had buried a pair of 3-pointers in the run, then the contest turned into a chess match.

It was South Oldham, a team that had not won at Anderson in at least 15 years, if ever, making the plays the Dragons had to make. None was more telling than after Anderson, down 57-55, forced a turnover, Whitfield came up with a steal and a layup with 3:10 to play.

"There were some King Kong gorillas to get off our backs and I think the girls did that," Wright said.

And it was Anderson showing the largest crowd to see a game at Anderson this year that it, too, had the mettle of a champion by never giving in. Eighth-grader Kaci Currens drove for a basket that made it 57-55, and McKee made 3-of-4 free throws that pulled Anderson within 59-58 at 1:20.

But South Oldham hit 3-of-4 charity tosses to make it 62-58 before McKee took a pass from Brown for a layup with 28.2 seconds left. Anderson forced a turnover on the ensuing inbounds pass, but the Lady Cats turned it right back over.

With 14.6 seconds to play, Whitfield hit the first of two free throws, putting South up 63-60.

quickly recovered when it looked like Cann might be open for a 3-pointer and Corrin Robinson drove for a layup with :05 left.

But with Anderson out of timeouts, Whitfield simply held the ball out of bounds until the clock ran out.

"That was my fault," Kays said. "We spent a timeout earlier that if we had had then we might have been able to get a three. Corrin saw the hole and took it to the basket."

"We have a young club and we are still looking for that leadership we need. I put this one on me."

And you can rest assured that Anderson County and South Oldham will mark the first few days of March on their calendars for a possible rematch in the Eighth Region tournament, which will also be held at Anderson.

"I hope we see them again," Kays said. "That means we are at least in the semifinals. This is the year they have been pointing to. They have seniors and they have gotten some good leadership from them. That's nice to have."

"They have a really good shot at getting to the finals. I think we do too."

Wright and South Oldham are also looking for that rematch.

"I think that is a pretty good possibility," he smiled.

Lady Bearcats host 10th Region power

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

Anderson County coach Tony Kays believes the best way to become the best is to play the best. The Lady Bearcats will continue to navigate a rugged schedule next Tuesday, Jan. 31, when they host Montgomery County, the team ranked at the top of the 10th Region.

The Lady Indians stood at 15-5, the same as Anderson, after Friday's games. Montgomery has beaten South Oldham, the team that slipped by Anderson last week. Montgomery prevailed over South Oldham, 54-50, in the Gateway Holiday Classic at Montgomery on Dec. 28.

"Montgomery is well-coached, have nice tradition, they have beaten some good teams," Anderson coach Tony Kays said. "That is why we put them on the schedule. We have a good team coming in."

Montgomery has beaten Woodford County and romped past perennial power Clark County twice.

Four of the five losses have been to ranked teams.

gomery in scoring at 14 and 11 points per game. Rogers is a long-range threat, hitting better than 41 percent of her 3-point shots.

"It will be a very good test for us," Kays said.

Stewart likely out for season

Kays confirmed that sophomore point guard Destiny Stewart is likely lost for the season. Stewart suffered a knee injury late in the game against Casey County on December 27. Kays allowed there is a slight chance Stewart could be back but it is highly unlikely.

Lady 'Cats cruise past Tates Creek

By John Herndon

A win over Tates Creek might have been like apple pie after a meal of spinach on Saturday.

"It was good to get back on track and get the bad taste out of our mouths," Anderson County girls' basketball coach Tony Kays said after his team posted a 56-45 win in the East Jessamine Coaches vs. Cancer Classic.

The final horn sounded about 16 hours after dropping a heart-breaker to South Oldham.

Sydney Brown turned in one of her best offensive games of the year with 14 points, while Makenzie Cann added 13 for Anderson.

The Lady Bearcats jumped to an early 17-4 lead, rolled with Tates Creek's best punch, then pulled away for the win.

"We had high energy, especially on defense," Kays said of the start.

Tates Creek, however, rallied to pull within three at halftime, but Anderson answered in the second half. Libby Pike came off the bench to score eight points in the first half, while Alex Avritt also came off the bench to finish with 10 points and a nice defensive game, according to Kays.

Corrin Robinson shut down Tates Creek's high scoring Oney Harrison, holding her to seven points. Peyton Hisel led the Lady Commodores with 24 points.

It was Anderson's second win of the season over Tates Creek on a neutral floor. Anderson had defeated Tates Creek at Bryan Station by 27 points on Dec. 10.

Saturday, Kentucky will be trying to hang on to its No. 1 ranking against LSU in Baton Rouge.

Glen and Jennifer Drury, however, got to

And we aren't talking about his jersey.

"He's never forgotten where he's come from," Glen Drury said. "He's genuine."

Both regional races unfolding as predicted

Girls looking like 3-team fight; boys with no clear-cut favorite

By John Herndon
Sports editor

With the district tournaments starting in less than a month, it's time to start taking a serious look at who are the real contenders and the pretenders in the race for the Eighth Region championship.

Fall sports should be well behind players now, freshmen and sophomores are no longer untested and coaches should have a feel about what their teams can and can't do.

There have been relatively few surprises in the girls' region, where it looks like a three-team race with one dark horse and a couple of spoilers that could also have something to say about who wins it all. Everyone else is just playing to see how far they can go.

The boys' region might be the biggest crapshoot the Eighth has seen since the mid-1970's. As many as eight different teams could have a legitimate chance at playing in Rupp Arena and four or five others could spring an upset.

Contenders

1. South Oldham. The Lady Dragons cracked the state's Top 10 several weeks ago and have done nothing to suggest they do not belong. South has the region's top player, Jasmine Whitfield, a good cast of role players and the most experienced team in the region.

2. Anderson County. The top should probably be 1 and 1a as South's 63-62 win Friday night suggests, but Anderson did not play particularly well for three quarters. The Lady Bearcats are the most talented team in the region, even after apparently losing point guard Destiny Stewart, but have not clicked on all cylinders very often.

3. Walton-Verona. Walton has beaten South Oldham this year and is the defending champ. While most feel Anderson and South Oldham should duke it out for the title, it is not uncommon to hear "Don't forget Walton-Verona" around the region.

Dark horse

4. Owen County. Owen has a dynamite guard in Rianna Gayheart and can beat anyone, as it did Walton-Verona. The big question is if the Rebels have enough weapons to navigate a regional tourney tour.

Spoilers

5. Simon Kenton. Sound defensive system and a lot of recent tradition.

6. Collins. Titans have been up-and-down but have enough talent in Leeara Cardwell and Aaliyah Wells to beat someone.

Boys' region contenders

1. South Oldham. The Dragons can shoot straighter than Sgt. York at times and have beaten six regional foes by more than 25 points a contest. They are the surprise of the region and might be the best team.

2. North Oldham. North has the region's best player in Devon Rowan and a very good inside-outside game, but will that be enough to win the team.

3. Anderson County. Yes, the Bearcats are in the hunt, even though they have split their last six games after starting the season at 11-0. Anderson has no superstars but might have as many different people that can be productive as any team in the region. Developing a consistent inside game is a major key.

4. Garrard County. Garrard has been the mystery team of the region as the Titans have been up-and-down but the Titans are big prize? In a year when the region is down, it very well might.

5. Oldham County. Defending regional champs have the region's best array of talent and have been there. No superstars but a talented group.

6. Simon Kenton. The Pioneers have never won the Eighth Region, but play defense with a passion. They also might have the best player you have not heard much about in guard Cody Chambers.

7. Owen County. Owen has never won a region and might have its best chance ever this year. Forward Sawyer Williams is a horse and is rounding into form after a football injury.

8. Anderson County. Yes, the Bearcats are in the hunt, even though they have split their last six games after starting the season at 11-0. Anderson has no superstars but might have as many different people that can be productive as any team in the region. Developing a consistent inside game is a major key.

9. Gallatin County. Under the radar, but Gallatin has an abundance of guards that play well together. In tournament play, that can be huge.

Spoilers

These probably don't have enough to win three straight regional tournament games but could certainly knock anyone in the region off.

10. Spencer County. Some injuries contributed to some early losses, but the Bears can pull an upset along the way.

11. Grant County. Vastly improved team this year.

12. Walton-Verona. It's hard to get a read on Walton-Verona. Anderson County routed Walton in December, but two nights later, Walton-Verona knocked off Owen County. It's been that kind of year.

13. Shelby County. Don't laugh at Shelby's 2-18 record. The Rockets have a strong 3-point shooter in Eric Schreiner and one of the region's best point guards in Bryan Wallace.

Region's top-ranked team has taken similar path to Bearcats

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

For several years, the story was the same in the Eighth Region: Anderson County and South Oldham would be nipping at the heels of Shelby County, Oldham County and, until 2005, Scott County at the top of the region's pecking order.

While Anderson finally broke through with a Sweet 16 trip three years ago, South Oldham has never been able to shatter that barrier.

When the 2011-12 season began, the Bearcats and Dragons were lumped together again, but this time as two perennially strong teams that were pegged to struggle.

Someone forgot to tell Anderson and South Oldham. They will tip off Friday night at 7:30 at South Oldham.

The Bearcats won their first 11 games and were 14-3 heading into Tuesday's game at Spencer County. South Oldham stood at 12-6 and had ascended to the top of the Eighth Region in the computer polls, which are based on strength of schedule.

According to the Rating the State rankings that appeared in Monday's Lexington Herald-Leader, South Oldham is favored by about 12 points on Friday.

"I had seen them in the summer and knew they had the ingredients (to be good)," Anderson coach Glen Drury said.

Veteran coach Steve Simpson perennially fields one of Kentucky's best outside-shooting teams. South Oldham was ranked eighth in the state in 3-point shooting (36.2 percent) and sixth in free throwing (71.9) in statistics released by the KHSAA last Thursday.

Anderson was fifth in 3-point shooting (38.7 percent) but not ranked in free throwing. The Bearcats are 11th in field goal shooting at 47.8 percent.

Junior Shae Goodlett

is South's only double-digit scorer but 6-5 junior Jack Sherry gives the Dragons a strong inside presence.

While South Oldham has no individuals in the state scoring or 3-point shooting leaders, the team is averaging nearly 72 points a game, sixth best in Kentucky. It is a testament to the tradition that Simpson has built in Crestwood.

"They are a great shooting team," Drury said. "They play their system very well and coach Simpson does a good job implementing it."

North Oldham rallies past 'Cats

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

Junior guard David Levitch scored 23 points to lead North Oldham to a 53-42 come-from-behind win over Anderson County last Tuesday night at Goshen.

Anderson had led 24-19 at the half, but North Oldham went on an 18-6 run to start the second half and then outscored Anderson 16-7 in the fourth quarter to seal the win.

"We played well in the first half," Anderson coach Glen Drury said, "but for some reason we left our emotions in the locker room at halftime. This was the first time this year we didn't play with passion."

North Oldham hit 15-of-19 free throws, while Anderson only took two foul shots, hitting one. North Oldham was called for only four fouls on the night.

"The point is (North Oldham does) a good job defensively," Drury told The Courier-Journal.

"They have the two best players in the region. I see no reason why they shouldn't win the region."

Devin Rowan, generally considered the top player in the region, scored nine points for the Mustangs, who improved to 14-7 on the year. Rowan's basket gave North Oldham a 41-39 win early in the fourth quarter. North Oldham never lost the lead again.

Darrin Laswell led Anderson with 15 points, while Jay Smith scored 11 and Seth Carmichael 10.

Youth hunting season yields wonderful memories

Happy New Year! Yep, I know it's almost the end of January for the year 2012 but this is my first column of the New Year so it just seemed too easy not to open with it. I do hope that the New Year has started out well for you and wish you continued good fortune and blessings for the upcoming year.

In my column last month, I pushed the free youth weekend deer hunt that took place on Dec. 31-Jan. 1.

I am not sure how many of you took the opportunity to take a kid out hunting for free that weekend but it turned out to be a decent couple of days as far as the weather goes at least for the time of year. My brother Keith and I took his oldest daughter, Teagan, on her first deer hunt on Dec. 31 at the Lilly Farm in Frankfort.

We saw deer but couldn't seem to get a decent shot for Teagan to try her aim. The second day of the short free season had Keith and Teagan out on my McDonald Road farm where they were able to see a couple of does but again unable to get the opportunity to harvest either of them.

Teagan seemed to enjoy the time with us and it's always fun to watch future hunters like her take an interest in the hunting tradition.

Jeff Lilly
Columnist

The youth hunting opportunities continued through Jan. 6 with the free youth hunting and trapping week. The first two days included the free deer hunting with the remainder of the week being open to small game also.

This piqued the interest of my youngest niece Kara, who is 8, and brother Keith's youngest.

Dressed head to toe in her camo she hit the ground running with sister Teagan for some squirrel hunting before the season ended. Keith and Paw Paw (Darrell) took the girls to the Lilly Farm for some fun and were able to harvest a nice squirrel for Kara.

Teagan managed to find an already dead 5-point buck and at least had her picture made with it. The girls are still talking about the adventure and will for many years I'm sure. They will always have the memories of even short hunts that sometimes don't always result in an actual harvest.

That's what the tradition of hunting and family is all about. Take a look at the pictures of Kara and Teagan and tell me they didn't enjoy their hunting trip!

Deer harvest totals

Kentucky's 2011-12 deer season officially closed Jan. 16. The overall harvest for all methods of hunting for the state numbered 119,647 deer. Anderson County hunters telechecked 1,915 deer for the season. Franklin County hunters harvested 1,558 deer while Shelby County recorded 2,158, Spencer 1,377, Nelson 1,637, Washington 1,578, Mercer 770 and Woodford County contributed 595.

Hunter education classes

Mark your calendars for May 12 if you or your child needs to qualify for your hunter's safety certificate. The class is free and will begin at 8 a.m. The 10-hour course will conclude with a written test and live fire exercises.

No registration is necessary and is held at the Anderson County Sportsman's Club located at the end of Old Joe Road. For more information contact Bill Brown at 502-680-0175 or email gmountjoy@win.net.

All hunters born on or after Jan. 1, 1975, shall, while hunting, carry a valid hunter education course completion card in addition to the appropriate Kentucky hunting license.

Local taxidermist to compete at NWTF national convention

Local taxidermist Justin Tinsley will be submitting some of his finest work to the National Wild Turkey Federation for judging at the 36th Annual NWTF Convention in Nashville, Tenn., being held Feb. 9-12. Justin has recently opened a local shop in Anderson County and specializes in deer mounts and plans to enter at least two recently completed projects into the competition. Check next month's column to see how Justin's hard work was awarded.

Take a kid hunting and fishing soon.

See ya outside!

Winter temperatures bring float and fly time for fishing

By Lee McClellan
Ky. Dept. of Fish and Wildlife Resources

The late Charlie Nuckles owned a tackle shop and lure company in east Tennessee, near South Holston Lake. Winter crappie anglers who fished small marabou jigs deep under bobbers complained to him about big smallmouth breaking off their rigs all the time.

This got Nuckles thinking. He, along with his brother Eddie, began experimenting with suspending small jigs, eventually settling on those tied with craft hair or duck feathers.

They fished these jigs 8-to-12-feet deep, suspended under bobbers cast on long, soft spinning rods along bluffs and deep points on South Holston Lake. They began to regularly catch smallmouth bass over four pounds on this new system. Word began to spread to other smallmouth lakes in the region, notably Dale Hollow Lake.

I read and heard about the technique and tried it a few times without success, using makeshift equipment ill suited to the task and fishing it with little passion. I wanted to get back to swimming a small bucktail jig just above bottom or casting live shiners - my preferred winter baits. After some friends starting having good success with the float and fly, I relented and bought the correct equipment and determined I would fish it until I caught a smallmouth.

It didn't take long. Within my first dozen casts of fishing the float and fly correctly, I caught a 19-inch smallmouth that weighed right at four pounds. I've been hooked since. Now that arctic winds chilled the air and water in Kentucky over the last week, it is time to try this effective technique. The colder the water, the better the float and fly works.

The float and fly imitates what happens to baitfish such as shad in reservoirs in mid-winter. "Once the water temperatures drop below 50 degrees, shad don't feel too good," said Gerry Buynak, assistant director of fisheries for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. "The cold water makes shad distressed and they flip around, twitch and swim in circles. The little jig imitates exactly what is happening to them."

Smallmouth bass suspend under schools of baitfish and pick off the ones twitching as they fight to survive winter's cold. Nature programmed smallmouth bass through the millennia to take advantage of easy feeding opportunities in winter. Female bass, especially, need winter nutrition to fuel egg development for spring spawning.

The next two months are the best time of year to employ the technique in the lower ends of Lake Cumberland, Dale Hollow Lake, Laurel River Lake, Green River Lake, Barren River Lake and the small mountain impoundments such as Cranks Creek (Herb Smith) Lake or Cannon Creek Lake.

When I got serious, I bought an 8-foot rod from a top of the line manufacturer, attached a decent reel and bought a mixture of 1/16-ounce jigs made from duck feathers, craft hair or a mixture of both.

I spooled on 4-pound test line and got busy. It isn't necessary to spend a ton on the rod as manufacturers now offer affordable spinning rods from 8- to 11-feet long.

A 1/16-ounce craft hair fly in combinations of light blue, chartreuse, white, blue or silver work well. I drop down to 1/32-ounce flies on bright, shimmering days after a cold front.

Duck feather flies with stands of red or chartreuse craft tied into them produce best when the water temperatures fall below 47 degrees. Some anglers apply a petroleum jelly based scent called "dope" to their flies.

I trim my craft hair flies to match the bend of the hook and apply liberal amounts of dope. This gives the fly a slim profile and no action, which turns lethargic smallmouths.

If the water is a little stained, I apply dope only to the head of the fly to let the craft hair breathe and undulate so the smallmouths can find it easier. I only apply dope to the head of duck feather flies.

Set the bobber about nine feet above the fly to start and adjust shallower or deeper as needed. Some anglers use a main line of 8-pound braided line running to a small brass three-way swivel with a leader of 4-pound fluorocarbon attached to one of the loops and clipping a small 7/8-inch pear-shaped plastic bobber to the other.

Others simply tie a fly to a 4-pound main line of clear or green fluorocarbon or monofilament line and attach the bobber to the line as they are more comfortable with one knot than three. Both catch trophy smallmouths.

Cast the fly to main lake and secondary points or rock bluffs. Allow the bobber to ride up and down with the waves, letting nature impart action on the fly.

After a time, reel in about five feet and repeat. In calm water, make the bobber winkle at you by shaking the rod tip up and down to give the fly action.

Set your drag lightly. Watch the bobber intently. Big smallmouth bass often barely take the bobber under after they inhale the fly and don't move.

Trophy smallmouth bass coming from deeper water often engulf the fly and move shallower, causing the bobber to flop over on its side. Set the hook immediately if this happens.

Tackle shops around Lake Cumberland or Dale Hollow Lake carry the correct rods, flies, dope and other float and fly accessories. An internet search reveals dealers that carry this equipment as well.

Burn away the winter blues with a slipping drag from a huge smallmouth bass that just took your fly. The float and fly is similar to the bobber fishing you did as a kid, but instead of bluegill hitting, it is a 21-inch smallmouth.

Hunters find sandhills cranes challenging

From staff reports

Kentucky's first modern hunting season for sandhill cranes came to a close Jan. 15. The month-long season marked the first time in nearly 100 years that Kentucky sportsmen and sportswomen had the opportunity to hunt sandhill cranes in the Commonwealth. By closing day, hunters had harvested 50 birds, according to a news release.

Kentucky had allowed for a maximum harvest of 400 sandhill cranes.

"The harvest number was not surprising to us because Kentucky does not have a tradition of sandhill crane hunting," Rocky Pritchett, Migratory Bird Program coordinator for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, said in the release. "These are extremely wary birds and are a challenge to hunt. Sandhill cranes are hunted in a fashion similar to geese, using decoys in fields. Sandhill cranes are hunted for their meat. They are generally regarded as the finest table fare among migratory birds."

Kentucky was the first state to allow sandhill crane hunting on the Eastern Population of sandhill cranes. The Mid-Continent Population of sandhill cranes has been hunted for more than 50 years in the United States.

Last fall, a survey coordinated by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service counted a minimum of 72,000 sandhill cranes in the Eastern Population. "This population has experienced significant growth over the last decade and has reached a point where we can allow a limited harvest without impacting the population," said Pritchett. "As a biologist it is my responsibility to ensure harvest does not negatively impact the population and this season will not harm the Eastern Population of sandhill cranes."

This season, most of the cranes were harvested in Hardin and Barren counties. These are traditional wintering areas for sandhill cranes in Kentucky.

Hunters had to pass an online identification course before being issued a permit. Hunters will have to complete a post-season survey as well.

"The information obtained from these surveys helps us better understand how the season went," said Pritchett. "The information obtained from this hunt will help us manage future hunts of sandhill hunts in Kentucky and other states that might potentially hunt sandhill cranes."

New archery range opens in Madison County

From staff reports

A new archery range is now open to the public at the Miller Welch-Central Kentucky Wildlife Management Area in Madison County, according to a news release from the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources.

Constructed on the northern edge of the WMA along Muddy Creek Road, the archery range consists of a 12-target traditional range and a 30-target course through the woods, Derek Beard, the department's wildlife coordinator said in the release.

Beard said the new ranges in Madison County will provide opportunity for area archers, bowhunters, and for groups such as sportsmen's organizations, 4-H clubs, scouts, schools and church organizations.

The traditional static range includes 12 lanes with targets set at 10 meters and 15 meters, in addition to targets at 20 yards to 60 yards. Archers shoot into large outdoor archery targets that are secured into target sheds. The second range is a walking woods course consisting of a loop trail with lanes cut and a target placed at the end of each shooting lane. Archers can move within the lane to a comfortable distance ranging from 10 yards up to 65 yards.

The new ranges are open daily from 9 a.m. Eastern time to sunset. To reduce impact to targets, broadheads are not allowed on arrows. Groups may apply to reserve a range for a shooting event, by submitting a WMA User Permit Application to the Area Manager for consideration. Call (859) 986-4130 for more information.

Kentucky Fish and Wildlife also has archery ranges at Jones-Keeney WMA in Caldwell County, Curtis Gates Lloyd WMA in Grant County, Otter Creek Outdoor Recreational Area in Meade County and West Kentucky WMA in McCracken County.
